CLOSING LUNCHEON

CLUB LADIES AND GUESTS HEAR YEARLY REPORTS — SEE OFFICERS INSTALLED

Perhaps the most brilliant event of the season was the luncheon given Tuesday by the ladies of the Tuesday Afternoon club closing the year's work. This very enjoyable affair was a fitting climax to the splendid achievements of the club during the past year and to the administration of Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, who has served as president so faithfully and well the past two years and who retires from that office. Members of the club with invited guests to the number of nearly two hundred gathered at the clubrooms in the Masonic temple Tuesday at 12 o'clock for this farewell luncheon. At the appointed hour the doors were opened into the dining-room and all found their places at the tables which were attractively decorated in bowls of pansies and strands of asparagus plumosis with pansies scattered over the cloth.

The three-course luncheon was served very expeditiously, after which Mrs. Jones stated that the reports of the various chairmen of committees and section chairmen, for the year would be given. These were two-minute reports and were very snappy and to the point, interesting to the guests as well as to the members, as they gave evidence as nothing else could of the wonderful accomplishments of the club during the year just closed.

Mrs. Daniel Campbell as chairman of the commercial committee of the Glendale Festival of Fruits and Flowers, in her brief report stated that as a result of the festival $402.17 was added to the clubhouse fund. She thanked the board for the honor shown her in appointing her first vice-president to fill a vacancy and paid a most beautiful tribute to the retiring president.

Mrs. Frederick Baker, chairman of the program committee, gave a brief report. The splendid programs of the past year were due to the forethought and capability of this hard-working chairman and her faithful co-workers. Mrs. Baker also acknowledged her debt to the president.

Mrs. William Ramsey was introduced by the president as the recording angel and reported that she had attended all of the meetings of the year, both regular and special, and recorded the minutes of the same. She felt much like the girl who kept a diary. She was so busy writing down the things she had been doing that she had no time to do anything to write about.

Mrs. A. L. Weaver, corresponding secretary, gave a report which was evidence that she has not been idle the past year. She gave her report in the style of the barker outside the circus tent who announced to the public, "Ladies and gentlemen, this is the largest animal in existence. From point to tip it measures 18 feet and from tip to point 18 feet, making a total, ladies and gentlemen, of 36 feet." Mrs. Weaver had sent out a total of 420 communications the past year.

Mrs. Jones introduced Mrs. Warren Roberts as the money bag and though small, she had been able to handle large sums and give a strict account of them. Mrs. Roberts' report showed that the club has 201 members in good standing, $666 has been taken in, in dues and membership fees the past year, and that $950 has been paid on the club lot. Other interesting figures were given and Mrs. Roberts closed her report with the following toast:

Tuesday Afternoon club members,
My hat's off to you.
I know you are every one
Loyal and true.
You have talent and beauty,
Intelligence and wit;
But when you are called on
To hustle a bit,
You forget all about
Your good looks and your pride,
And do things so well
We are known far and wide
As the club which accomplishes
Every task undertaken,
And we're the pride of the valley
Unless I'm mistaken.
So here's to you, my sisters,
Drink this toast with me,
While this year we've two hundred,
Next year let's have three.

In introducing Mrs. E. H. Willisford, curator of the literary section, the president explained that the Tuesday Afternoon club is fortunate in having members who are capable of leading the study sections so that it has been unnecessary to engage outsiders for this work, as is the custom in most clubs. Mrs. Willisford reported a glorious year for the literary section. There are 37 members and the average attendance has been 25. The program was made out at the beginning of the year, printed in the year book, and carried out to the letter. Programs were arranged as appropriate to the time of year as possible. Mrs. Willisford looks forward to even better things for the section next year.

Mrs. Freeman Kelley, curator of the music section, gave one of the best reports of the afternoon. The section has been very active under the leadership of this talented and capable woman, who thanked her members feelingly for their loyalty to her.

Miss Alice Frank gave a good report for the home economics section, although the work was hindered during the past few months on account of Miss Frank's illness. She was not able to carry to fruition all of her plans for the section.

Mrs. W. E. Evans, chairman of the Shakespeare section, which is only a year old, spoke with enthusiasm of the work of her department. There are thirteen members of the Shakespeare class and each one has determined to secure at least one member for the coming year. Mrs. Evans has accepted the chairmanship again and has been able to secure for the club as instructor, Mrs. Maizie Garrett, a very able and accomplished woman who makes a specialty of this work. The Shakespeare section contributed $20 to the building fund, and accomplished a remarkable feat in holding a "polished" wienie roast.

Mrs. R. E. Chase, chairman of the art and travel section, after announcing that the china painting class being conducted by Mrs. Hearnshaw for love of the club was filled, with five on the waiting list, gave a clever little report of her work the past year in rhyme, which the president pronounced very artistic.

Mrs. P. S. McNutt, chairman of the parliamentary law section, had given her report at a previous meeting, but Mrs. Jones called attention to the beautiful silk banner won by Mrs. McNutt in the parliamentary contest held at the Long Beach convention, which spoke volumes for this very able and learned little lady.

Mrs. Charles E. Hutchinson, chairman of the legislative section, also a baby section in point of years, said that one of the most worthy monuments should be to the pioneer. We profit in life by the mistakes of others, so it is rather unfortunate to be first. The legislative section is a pioneer. There was nothing to guide so the section made a leap and found they had landed safely across the abyss of doubt and fear. Mrs. Hutchinson said: "We procured the first copies of the amendments to the constitution and met each week for some time previous to election that we might cast an intelligent vote at the

TO BE PRINTED FRIDAY

FIRST LIST OF NAMES OF NEWS CONTESTANTS TO APPEAR IN FRIDAY'S ISSUE

Will your name appear as a candidate in The News $2000 popularity contest Friday?

It may not be printed unless you fill out a nomination blank and have your name entered. If you do not care to get in the race yourself, perhaps you know of some friend who would win a prize, or who at least would do well if they took the matter up.

Many successful candidates in other contests have started their campaign when the first list of names was published, and your name with the initial number of votes accompanying it will at once interest your friends and acquaintances in your candidacy.

Although the list as published may be of considerable length, the contestants really in the race need not be necessarily alarmed, as in a list of forty people, only four might be waging an active campaign, as many of the other names might have been sent in by friends.

The contest is but barely nine days old, and has really just begun, so there is still plenty of time to enter.

The prizes are well worth anyone's effort. The $850.00 Maxwell is fully equipped and the machines sold at the local Maxwell agency have made good, and a real auto in every sense of the word.

The Schiller piano is well known all over the country and is an instrument of inherent worth and would certainly make a welcome addition to almost any home. Then there are trips to either of the expositions, three $75.00 scholarships to the Isaacs-Woodbury Business college, a $50.00 bank deposit at the First National bank and other prizes not yet advertised.

You, as well as anyone, can have one of these prizes if you "get in the game" now and become a full fledged entrant in the Evening News $2000 contest. Nomination ballot and free coupon will be found on the fourth page of today's issue.

RISE OF CIVIL SERVICE

WISCONSIN COMMISSIONER SAYS PUBLIC IS STRONGLY IN FAVOR OF SYSTEM

That the people of Wisconsin after considerable experience are strongly in favor of the civil service system of that state is the statement of Mr. Perry Ap Roberts of River Falls, Wis. Mr. Ap Roberts is a state civil service commissioner in Wisconsin. He said: "The civil service law is not by any means perfect. It has not yet been equipped with the complete regulation of the discharge of employes; otherwise it is all that could be desired.

"The control of between 2500 and 3000 state employes has come under the civil service department, which controls the appointment of stenographers, accountants, attorneys in the attorney-general's office, chemists under the state pure food commissioner, a large variety of inspectors, guardians, attendants, nurses, physicians and other employes in the defective institutions of the state.

"It also controls the laborers. In order to get on an accredited list, laborers have to compete against a standard. All other employes take a competitive examination. The examinations are very searching. For example, a game warden is given a complete physical examination. He is tested for strength, shooting, running, eyesight and then is given a written examination to test his general education, understanding of the game laws, mentality and other points. Finally he is subjected to an oral examination which brings out his judgment, temperament and peculiar qualifications for that position.

"It is the aim of the state to give the oral examination without bias. Politics and religion are entirely eliminated. In taking the written examination no names are given, papers are identified only by a number and that number is not connected with a name until the complete examination is over.

"Recently the commissioners established an 'efficiency bureau' for standardizing work. From records this bureau ascertains, for instance, how many letters a clerk should address in an hour; how many accounts of so many items a clerk should make up in a day; how many auto license applications a clerk should open and send out in a day. It ascertains how many patients, doctors, internes and nurses can care for at one time. By comparative study of individuals, ages, etc., it is ascertained what results in curing patients should be possible.

"If the results fall below a certain standard, say 70 per cent, the reason is sought; if they are higher than 90 per cent, the reason for success is asked, so that the better methods may be followed.

"This efficiency department is the latest addition to civil service. It suggests important methods for business. In the methods of selection and employment of help the business man has much to learn from civil service. At the same time in the matter of determining inefficiency and discharging employes, civil service has much to learn from the business man.

"From these examination tests the department is required to submit to the heads of departments the three names at the top of the list. The appointing officer makes choice of one. This eliminates politics from the service.

"The present governing powers of Wisconsin are more or less reactionary. Civil service has been attacked by the legislature, which has sought to emasculate the law by different methods. However, the friends of the system gathered evidence in its favor. It was shown that the appointing officers and the merit system saved state employes from the tremendous pressure inflicted on them under the spoils system. It was also shown that the civil service system was immensely more economical than the old methods. The officials of the system appeared before the legislature and presented facts that demonstrated the high usefulness of the system to the state. The result was that the civil service law of Wisconsin has gone through the fire without alteration. Of course if they could accomplish such a thing the enemies of civil service in Wisconsin might destroy it by taking away its financial support; but the public sentiment throughout the state is strongly in favor of the system."

ESSAY ON INSTINCT

We know that different species of the Hymonoptera have a paralyzing instinct (i. e., an instinct to paralyze their prey). They lay their eggs in spiders, beetles or caterpillars. First, the victim is subjected by the wasp to a certain operation and they will exist in a dormant state for a certain number of days and thus provide the larvae with fresh meat. This operation is performed by stinging the nerve centers of the victim, because it is the wish of the enemy to destroy the power of locomotion without killing. The Scolia attack the larvae of the rose beetles and sting it in one point only, but in this point the motor ganglia are situated and those ganglia alone. The stinging of other ganglia would cause death. The yellow winged Sphex, which attacks the cricket, has by the instinctive feeling realized that the cricket has three nerve centers, which serve its three pairs of legs. It stings the insect first under the neck, then behind the prothorax and then where the thorax joins the abdomen. The Ammophila Hisuta gives nine successive strokes of its sting upon nine nerve centers of its caterpillar and then seizes the head and squeezes it between its mandibles enough to cause a paralysis without death. No doubt this operation is sometimes given uneffectively, for it has been recently shown that the Ammophila sometimes kill the caterpillar instead of paralyzing and also that it sometimes incompletely paralyzes it. But because instinct is, like intelligence, fallible, because it also shows individual deviations, it does not at all follow that the instinct of the Ammophila has been acquired as has been claimed by intelligent experiments. As a matter of fact, the hereditary transmission of a contracted habit is effected in an irregular and far from precise manner, supposing it is ever really effected at all.

Inherited Habit of Instinct

The particular form of body and organs, which perform the different functions, are inherited by insects and other animals. The nervous system is with a structure similar to that of the parents. Repeated acts constitute a habit, an inherited habit is called instinct. Example, moths are accustomed to finding nectar in the night—blooming flowers, usually white ones. This habit is transmitted in the structure of the nervous system, so it is said moths have the instinct to go to white objects. Instincts are trustworthy in only one narrow set of conditions. Now that fires and lights of various kinds are used at night, this instinct has caused many deaths. The instinct to provide for offspring is present and is necessary to the perpetuation of all but the simplest animals. The mud-wasp, or other animals maybe, used to illustrate as well as the mud-wasp, because of inherited habit, makes the cell of the right size, lays the egg and provides food for the offspring.

Instinct as Guide for Using Muscles

When one is tired the instinctive feeling called fatigue tells us when to rest. There also comes the restless uneasy feeling over a normal human being when confinement and restraint of the muscles have reached an unhealthy limit. This feeling should not be repressed. An unheeded instinct is as useless as an alarm clock that has been habitually disregarded. Some fish, as the cod, herring and salmon go many miles up fresh water rivers to spawn. It is possible that this is because they were originally fresh water species; yet they die if placed in fresh water except during the spawning season. They go because of instinct.

It is said that it is instinct that impels the cuckoo to migrate and lay her eggs in other birds' nests. When an action is performed by individuals without their knowing the cause, it it called instinctive. It is a great error to think that the greater number of instincts have been acquired by habit in one generation, and then transmitted by inheritance to the succeeding generation. It can be clearly shown that the most wonderful instincts with which we are acquainted, namely, those of the hive-bee and many ants, could not possibly have been acquired by habit in one generation, but it is habit or instinct that has transmitted them. In the variations of instinct it has been asked why the ability to use some other material when wax was deficient. But what material could be substituted?

Domestic Instinct

In the case of cats one takes to catching mice, another to rats, and these are known to be inherited. The white butterfly does not know why she lays her eggs on the leaf of the cabbage. A certain kind of a young wolf without any training, as soon as it scents its prey, stands motionless like a statue and then slowly crawls forward with a peculiar gait; another kind will rush around rather than at a herd of deer. These may be called domestic instincts. Domestic instincts are sometimes spoken of as actions which have become inherited solely from long continued and compulsory habit; but this is not true. It certainly is doubtful if anyone would have thought to train a dog to point, had not some particular dog shown a tendency. Selection of various instincts are shown for scarcely any animal is more difficult to tame than the young of the wild rabbit and rarely any animal is tamer than the young of the tame rabbit. But it can hardly be expected that the domestic rabbits have often been selected for tameness alone, the greater part of the change being from extreme wildness to extreme tameness, to habit and long continued confinement.

PROMINENT MAN DEAD

H. C. DANIELS, LONG A MOTORMAN FOR EAGLE ROCK ROAD, IS NO MORE

Residents of Glendale have missed for some time a well-known figure from the streets and from his accustomed place of work. For more than seven years H. P. Daniels served the Glendale-Montrose street railway faithfully and rendered valuable service to the public as motorman on the Eagle Rock line. So firmly had he become identified with the railway that the public were not long in noticing that the familiar figure was missing.

Daniels was a man of between 60 and 65 years of age. Up to about two months ago he was to be found daily at his post, but lately his health began to fail and his condition became manifest in his appearance. Suffering from a serious attack of nephritis, Daniels was at last compelled to give up work and go to Hot Springs, Ark., where he hoped the climate and treatment might cure him. From his arrival at the springs he steadily grew worse and the end came Saturday night.

Daniels had a number of warm friends who appreciate his sterling worth and a large circle of acquaintances who valued his unfailing courtesy to the public.

"THE COWBOY AND THE LADY" AT PALACE GRAND TONIGHT

A sensational film of love and romance will be shown at the Palace Grand theater tonight when S. Miller Kent appears in "The Cowboy and the Lady," by Clyde Fitch.

The story deals with Ted North, a young easterner, who falls desperately in love with Margaret Primrose, daughter of the man his father had ruined. Primrose held his enmity against young North and refuses to permit his daughter to see him. To spite North, Primrose forces his daughter into marriage with a young millionaire by name of Weston.

Young North, heartbroken, leaves for the West. Weston neglects his bride and continues the dissipation that had already made him notorious. Weston's health gives way and seven years later, upon the advice of his physician, he goes West, taking his wife with him.

Upon their arrival at a small cattle station, Mrs. Weston renews her acquaintance with North and Weston carries on his dissipation despite his doctor's warnings, meets a girl named Molly, proprietress of a dance hall, and by his attentions arouses the jealousy of her sweetheart, "Quick-Foot Jim." Weston prevails upon Molly to elope with him, but as they start to put their plans in operation, "Jim" discovers them and kills Weston. Circumstantial evidence then plays an important role and North is accused of the crime. Molly is spirited away by Jim and North is convicted of the crime. In the meantime Mrs. Weston learns the true facts in the case, a posse starts in search of "Jim" and—see the rest in the motion picture sensation, "The Cowboy and the Lady."

Tonight the last episode of "The Black Box" will also be shown.

SUMMER TEMPTATIONS

This evening at the mid-week meeting at the First Congregational church, Third and Central, an interesting and important meeting will be held to consider the topic, "The Temptations of Summer." Among the sub-topics will be "The Dangers of Idleness," "Right and Wrong Pleasures," "Sabbath Observance in Vacations," "What is Sunday reading?" A song and prayer service will precede the discussion. The meeting will be held in the south room. The public is cordially invited.

ELLIS CLUB CONCERT

LOCAL CONTINGENT ATTENDS FAMOUS MALE SINGING ORGANIZATION

Quite a large contingent of members and associate members of the Ellis club of Los Angeles went to the city Tuesday night to attend the fourth concert of the nineteenth season of that famous choral organization. The Ellis club is recognized by musicians of more than national fame as a society that has reached the front rank of musical achievements.

Mr. J. B. Poulin, the musical director of the club, who is also director of the Woman's Lyric club, both of which organizations took part along with the orchestra in the recent symphony concert in Los Angeles, had brought the club to a very high pitch of perfection, as was seen Tuesday night. Mr. Poulin is a graceful, forceful conductor, and he easily brought out the capacities and ideals of this organization. From the opening number, "Drontheim" (King Olaf's Christmas), by Protheroe, to the closing symphonic ode, "The Desert," there was not a rough place. The singing of the club was all that could be desired, full of richness of tone, without hesitation, smooth, precise and replete with profound feeling. The clash of the Vikings' swords, the gleams of the firelight dancing on helm and hauberk, played throughout the first chorus.

Wohlgemuth's "Secret Love" was sung with much tenderness and the humorous "Idylle Mongolienne" was given with crisp interpretation, accompanied by two pianos played by Miss Mary O'Donoughhue and Miss Frances L. Flint.

Miss Eva Mylott, the well-known Australian contralto, sang with great feeling Giordini's "Caro Mio Ben," "Oh, That We Two Were Maying," by Nevin, and Salter's dramatic "The Cry of Rachel." Mr. Lott, the baritone of the club, sang the Arthur Foote music, "The Farewell of Hiawatha."

The second part of the program was opened by Miss Mylott, who sang with great dramatic power Saint-Saens' passionate aria from "Samson and Delilah," "Mon Coeur s'ouvre a ta Voix." Then came the piece of the evening, "The Desert," by Felicien David, translated from the French by the Rev. Charles J. Brooks. The tenor solos were taken by Mr. Proctor and Mr. Ingram of the club, while Mr. Hobart Bosworth read the recitations. The mystic influence of the desert, the march of the caravan, the sandstorm, the calm after the storm, night, evening meditation, sun rise, the chant of the muezzin, the departure of the caravan—all these gradations were brought out in tone colors that were profoundly impressive.

Mr. Poulin, whose efforts made this wonderful concert possible, it will be remembered came out to Glendale six months ago and organized a mixed choral club under the leadership of Mr. C. E. Ringquest. This society made such progress that it was able to give two concerts. It is known as the Choral club and will resume its work again about the beginning of September. It is likely that after some more training the members of the club may be asked to assist in some of the wonderful productions of the Lyric or the Ellis clubs. The leaders of the Glendale society are anxious to get from ten to fifteen more members. There are now about fifty members in the club. Those wishing to join should call Mr. Ringquest, Glendale 872W, or Mrs. Campbell, Glendale 102J.

AN OPEN LETTER

Lynn Helm, Referee in Bankruptcy,
918 Title Insurance Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif.:

Sir: Replying to your notice of the discharge of Paul C. Butterfield and the cancellation of his debts, according to the laws of bankruptcy, I beg to suggest that when the bankrupt courts of Los Angeles shall have cancelled the unpaid debts of Paul C. Butterfield and when the pardoning powers of heaven shall have permitted the said Paul C. Butterfield to conceal the burdens he has imposed upon his fellow man under the cloak of faith and prayer and proclaimed that "of such is the kingdom of heaven"—when all that shall have been done in the name of law and religion—the great indelible book of justice will still show that Paul C. Butterfield owes the people who trusted him and are still suffering in consequence of that trust.

Respectfully,

J. C. BELDIN,

LACK OF BALANCE

Not many days ago Riverside was rejoicing in what it believed to be a high honor won by a young Polytechnic student of that city. This youth, who may be reckoned as a species of "Dr. Jeykll and Mr. Hyde," informed his friends that he had entered as a contestant in an oratorical contest to be held at Kansas City. They are kindly people at Riverside and there was no lack of interest in the contest. The youth informed his friends that the subject of his address was to be "Peace." He even read them extracts from the now famous essay. He was praised and feted on all hands and finally sent on to Kansas City in a blaze of triumph and at the expense of his friends.

Not long after there came to Riverside reports that the contest was a mere fabrication; but the ill-balanced youth wrote home that it was all right and that he had won the first prize, a silver trophy, which he would have the pleasure of bringing home to exhibit to them. That settled the affair in the minds of his friends. The supposed triumphant orator was met at the depot by a local band and a crowd and escorted in triumph to his home.

Reports, however, continued to circulate to the effect that the whole affair was a sham and that the youth had played off a gigantic hoax on the community. Taxed with his crime, he confessed that it was all a piece of fraud devised by himself. He had never been to Kansas City and there had been no contest there anyway; the trophy had been manufactured to his order and had been paid for out of the Riverside money his friends had collected for him.

Doubtless there are some people who will profess to think that this was clever. Shallow minds may say that the boy was deserving of some credit for the ingenuity of his scheme. His thesis was well written, it is said; and he must have had a great deal of native cunning and duplicity to have deceived so many people; but what is the net result? He has seriously injured himself; he has inflicted a gross slight on the community in which he lives and he has cast some dishonor on the school in which he had progressed so far as to have become president of the student body.

It will take a long time to efface the evil effects of this unbalanced youth's act. His crime will have secondary effects on the whole community which are likely to be felt for some time to come. Others will suffer vicariously for his crime and it is almost certain that future students at the Polytechnic will feel the reflex effect of this boy's folly.

Human nature is a singular entity. It would almost seem as though this unfortunate youth were possessed by some evil spirit that urged him on to his destruction. He must have known what would be the result of what he was doing and yet some apparently irresistible force urged him over the line that divides honor and shame.

Whatever is the condition of mental unbalancedness that must have existed in this boy's mental make-up, it is undoubted that he will suffer for this momentary aberration all his days; others will suffer along with him and the effects of this deviation from the straight path will trail along through the world even after he is dead. It never pays to leave the customary and the old paths; the path of truth, the path of honor, can have no substitute. He who thinks he can leave the old paths even for a momentary whim will find himself besmirched with the mud and mire of disgrace and will spend the balance of his days trying in vain to wipe away the stain.

DEFENSE OF AMERICA

In some ways it may be an immense advantage to this country that the "pork barrel" politicians of the national government have prevented the building of a great American navy. It certainly is the favor of Providence that during all this defenseless time the United States has not been attacked by outside enemies. That such actual conditions should be continued much longer could not be expected even by the most sanguine. It would take a "statesman" of more than usually pachydermatous understanding to believe that in the midst of an era of the most sanguinary fighting the world has ever seen, this country with its money coffers lying open and defenseless, should not prove a bait irresistible to some of the well-nigh bankrupt governments of Europe.

Up to this point the United States has practically invited the international looter. At the present moment New York and other eastern cities, Seattle, San Francisco and other Pacific coast cities, are offering themselves an easy prey to any capable marauder who can undertake their capture and hold them to ransom under the laws of war. The United States navy, with all its brave and gallant crews of highly trained naval experts, is no match for the long-range guns of other navies. This country has no adequate defense either on sea or land.

Recent developments of the European war, however, make it a matter of question whether or not it has been a blessing in disguise that our naval building plans have been held up by the self-seeking solons of congress. The success of submarine warfare makes it imperative that this country revise its naval program and begin building submarines on a larger individual scale and in greater numbers than ever contemplated by naval experts.

There can be little doubt that the submarine, as far as development is concerned, is the latest thing in naval development. It is reasonable to suppose that had the kaiser anticipated the course of this war and the non-utility of his great dreadnaught fleet, which is still hiding in the Elbe canal, he would have spared his country the enormous expense of building dreadnaughts and superdreadnaughts, and devoted his money to the construction of large submarines, with a wide sea-going range, and have swept the seas of his enemies.

As it is now, the lesson has been learned by all, and it remains for the United States to construct an immense fleet of the latest type and largest size of submarine for coast defense. With 400 such vessels divided between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and with the Panama canal as a connecting link, this country should be able to bid defiance to all outside enemies and to inforce by means of sea-going submarines, if necessary, the justice and equity between nations which it is the desire of all the people of the United States to see enthroned on earth.

OUR COMMON HUMANITY

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin." This saying may be somewhat hackneyed, but it fits very naturally into the situation in the opposing trenches in Europe just at present. The rank and file of the armies has no quarrel. In any case there is no cause of quarrel which they would not be ready to solve without recourse to arms. Most wars have been caused by misunderstanding. Take away the misunderstanding and you would have peace.

In the old dueling days in Europe a Russian prince imagined himself wronged by an Englishman. Neither understood the other's language and there was no time for explanation; so a duel was arranged by their seconds and the Englishman awaited his opponent when the Russian rushed up and exclaimed something, which being interpreted was found to mean that someone had explained to him that there was no insult after all. "Why did you not tell me?" he asked. The Englishman's friend explained that his principal knew all the time exactly how the matter stood, but had said, "Oh, let the beggar have his shot at me. It's easier than explaining."

Doubtless the men of all the combatant armies feel very much the same way. The interested rulers may find their account in misrepresenting matters; but it would not be difficult for both English and Germans to come to an agreement if there were no one standing by to misrepresent. Meantime it is easier to fight than to explain.

It has been found that even in the trenches the men take advantage of certain lulls in the fighting to fraternize. The kaiser and his immediate entourage of Prussian junkerdom would probably resent this friendly feeling between the combatants; but even they dare not press the yoke of militarism too hard on the soldier's neck. Therefore we find English Tommies and Prussian landwehr hastening to stretch their legs outside the trenches and exchanging courtesies and luxuries.

It is said that the British have had a great admiration for one German soldier, by name Ludwig. Ludwig is an immense grenadier who has performed feats that have excited the admiration of his country's foes and every now and then when a lull occurs in the fighting, the Tommies call out for "Ludwig." Ludwig appears, makes them a profound bow and retires again to his own lines amid ringing British cheers.

There is a basis on which could easily be built a lasting friendship and respect. If instead of fomenting a feeling of hatred between the German nation and the British efforts had only been made to bring the two nations together there might long ere now have been consummated an international understanding that would have been an excellent guarantee of peace on earth.

SURPRISE PARTY

The spacious grounds of the Graham residence, 235 East Third street, were all ablaze with light and color Tuesday evening when a merry party of friends assembled to have dinner with Miss Virginia Graham. The dinner was served under the ancient, spreading trees on the lawn. The tables were lit with red candles and a profusion of Japanese lanterns made the scene assume a carnival appearance.

Those present were Lou Kirri, the well-known contractor of 1318 Hawthorne street (Harvard apartments), in whose honor the party was given, although he was not aware of it until the evening was well advanced; Bert Anderson, E. Kiefer, Ray Kennedy and Lyle Williams. All of these are members of the Elks' White Squadron Patrol. There were also present: Miss Olive Dean of 641 Coronado street, Los Angeles; Mrs. L. Kirri, Miss Ethel Graham, Miss Virginia Graham and Miss Inez Harrison.

After dinner the whole party joined in wishing Mr. Lou Kirri many happy returns of his birthday and the men of the party presented him with a valuable and beautiful gold stick pin. Mr. Kirri made a suitable reply. The presentation was a complete surprise to him. The merry guests and their hostess then got into two autos and whirled down to Santa Monica and Venice, where they spent the balance of the evening to their hearts' content.

BRALYS ENTERTAIN

Mr. and Mrs. John Hyde Braly of 205 North Brand boulevard are entertaining this week Mrs. Braly's sister, Mrs. C. W. Wells and daughter, Miss Blanche Wells of Minneapolis, Minn. These ladies in company with Mr. Wells, who is a prominent Minneapolis real estate man, arrived here last Sunday on the special excursion train and Mr. Wells is attending the national convention of real estate men, which convenes in Los Angeles this week. Tom Ingersoll, the genial national secretary, was a member of the party, and being a friend and fellow townsman of the Wells family, made the trip very pleasant for them. Mr. and Mrs. Braly are showing their guests the beauties of this favored section. Tuesday they lunched at the Los Angeles Country club and the entire party will be guests at the reception to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Doheny at their magnificent Chester place home this evening. The visitors are delighted with Southern California and Glendale, this being their first visit here.

Mrs. Wells was for many years state regent of the Daughters of the Revolution of Minnesota and her daughter is a graduate of Wellesley so they are most delightful guests. They leave Sunday for San Diego to visit the fair and Mr. and Mrs. Braly are endeavoring to crowd all the good times possible into their short visit.

At 5 o'clock the players enjoyed a full-course dinner, places being laid for sixteen, which included Glendale and Los Angeles people.

Mrs. A. G. Williams of 1690 Stocker street was the guest of her mother, Mrs. S. Boyer of Radium Springs during the week.

TROPICO

Supt. Kennedy of the municipal playgrounds is arranging a series of events and sports that will feature the street carnival Thursday afternoon. There will be so many exhibition drills and so many events scheduled to occur on the streets that afternoon that the problem arises as to how one can witness so many events at the same time. The grandstand affords a most delightful and shady place, where five hundred spectators can sit and enjoy the different games with ease and comfort. Two blocks away will be the band playing stirring airs, while the drill teams of several orders of the K. of P. and the Elks will be executing some difficult and intricate evolutions. One solution will be to come early, avoid the rush and stay late. The evening's program will close with a street dance and a confetti battle. The business center of Tropico is gay in holiday attire and every citizen is inviting his friends in Los Angeles, in fact, throughout the county, to be present at this street carnival.

While the late Marshall Wilder was joking most of the time, he really was attending to the serious business of getting together a modest fortune.

CLUB LUNCHEON

November election. Since the club opened we have held monthly meetings and been addressed by Mrs. Seward Simons, Mrs. E. K. Foster and Mrs. Wolf. At the other meetings our own members have had splendid and instructive papers covering subjects of vital interest to women. We have kept informed regarding the bills before the legislature urging our senators and assemblymen to pass the child labor bill, and our club, as a club, was the only one in the state that gave financial assistance in passing the red light abatement act. We know that the greatest successes are not counted in numbers, but the little each member appropriates to herself gives her a broader outlook upon the field of her usefulness as taking her part as a citizen of the golden state of California."

Mrs. Hutchinson was the delegate of the Tuesday Afternoon club to the federation convention at San Francisco and came home enthusiastic in regard to the convention. She achieved the impossible when at the request of the president she gave a five-minute report of the five days' convention. Her brief report was crowded with good thoughts from the convention.

Mrs. A. W. Tower was hampered by modesty in giving herself due credit in her report of the work done by the section of public affairs recently organized, of which she is the chairman.

Mrs. Frank Grosvenor of the civics committee spoke of the many things that she wished to do as chairman of this section, many of which she had been unable to accomplish. One of the things we owe to Mrs. Grosvenor and her able assistants is the Glendale municipal band. She "put it up" to the city trustees that Glendale ought to be ashamed not to have a band and that honorable body made it possible by paying the band to keep the boys together and they have formed an organization of which we are proud.

Mrs. L. W. Sinclair gave a comprehensive and interesting report of the work of the philanthropic section, of which she is chairman. Through this section the club holds memberships in the Maternity cottage, the Children's hospital, the King's Daughters hospital and the Coleman house.

These institutions received special help during the year. The section also supervised the sending of a large amount of provisions to the suffering Belgians.

It was found during the year that the philanthropic section had all it could attend to outside of Glendale so a local charities' committee was organized with Mrs. E. D. Yard as the head. Mrs. Yard has given much time to this important work and reported many dollars spent for groceries, medicines, rent, etc., for the worthy poor. Mrs. Yard seems to be conducting an employment bureau and a free day nursery also, as she receives daily calls from those out of work and has been able to find places for many of these unfortunates while she cares for the children of mothers who are working out by the day in her own home.

Mrs. H. H. Martin of the hospitality committee, known as the cooks of the club, gave a brief greeting.

Mrs. Charles Homer Temple of the decorating committee was content with throwing bouquets at the members of her committee.

Mrs. H. Lee Clotworthy of the remembrance committee, whose duty it is to extend sympathy to those in distress, stated that fortunately the committee had had little to do the past year.

Lastly, the retiring president, Mrs. Jones, made a brief report of the two years of her administration. She said: "In reviewing the two years just past we have many reasons to be proud of our club record. We have not only won a higher standing in the federation, but we have been of some value to our community as well. The many fine programs which the public and guests have been privileged to enjoy without any expense to themselves, the splendid work of our philanthropic and local charities committees, seeking to aid distress both at home and abroad, our fine study sections, splendid active committees furthering the harmonious workings of our organization, are all worthy of highest admiration.

"The loyal membership giving support as a whole should not be overlooked, nor our ever efficient board of directors, who have directed the destiny and policies of the Tuesday Afternoon club to the best of their ability, thereby making an unusually successful administration for your retiring president. However, we should realize that work just for work's sake does not profit us one iota, unless we can be of some benefit to someone or some movement outside of our club circle.

"That such has been the case and that we have not just revolved in a circle as a mutual admiration society or for the sake of personal enjoyment, has been amply proved by the fact that out of the whole Los Angeles district of 125 clubs, ours was the only one to respond to the call for financial aid to the red light abatement campaign committee.

"With the co-operation of the Parent-Teachers and school children, many pounds of food were sent to the starving Belgians. Coming closer to home, through out philanthropic committee we have assisted the Children's hospital, Maternity cottage, Coleman House association and the day nursery; while in our own city our local charity committee has aided many families in distress and gladdened the hearts of many sick and sorrowing ones.

"We have recently put through by much hard work and sheer nerve force a most successful Festival of Fruits and Flowers, which has advertised our town in a very favorable way and at the same time netted us the sum of $402 to apply to our club lot fund.

"In the last two years we have earned over $1600, which leaves us now owing the small sum of $350 on our club lot, the corner for which we agreed to pay the sum of $2000.

Our other lot being clear, this leaves the club in a splendid financial condition, with $100 in the treasury to turn over to the new board of directors.

"I do not consider our realty property or cash on hand to be our greatest or most valuable assets. To my mind the many splendid women among our officers or committees or heads of departments who have all, as I said before, made my administration so pleasant and successful, these are our jewels and we should prize them and the work they have faithfully performed beyond measure. Among these women are many capable of holding the position which I am now vacating—women who have real initiative—the initiative to do the right thing without being told. With such women as these and our splendid membership of over 200 women, we have an organization that is destined to become one of our most influential clubs, and which is now a club which any president may feel proud to represent. For the splendid support you have given, I desire to thank each and every one of you, and to pledge the same support to your new officers now soon to be installed, so

"Here's to the friends we class as old,
And here's to those we class as new;
May the new grow to us old,
And the old ne'er grow to us new."

An impressive ceremony followed, the burning of a mortgage for $800 on the club lot, which had been paid during the year.

Officers for the coming year as follows were called to the platform by the president and installed: Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, president; Mrs. Daniel Campbell, first vice-president; Mrs. E. H. Willisford, second vice-president and chairman of program; Mrs. O. W. Tarr, recording secretary; Mrs. Frank Grosvenor, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Warren Roberts, treasurer; Mrs. J. W. Usilton, Mrs. David Black and Mrs. H. Lee Clotworthy, directors. Mrs. Bartlett in assuming her new office thanked the club for the honor conferred upon her and named the following heads of sections and committees, others to be announced later: Philanthropic, Mrs. L. W. Sinclair; local charities, Mrs. J. G. Hunchberger; courtesy, Mrs. Jones; household economics, Mrs. Frederick Baker; decorating, Mrs. J. F. Hearnshaw; remembrance, Mrs. Freeman Kelley; parliamentary law, Mrs. P. S. McNutt; custodian of property, Mrs. O. O. Clark; hospitality, Mrs. Ella Richardson; club house fund, Mrs. Daniel Campbell; literary, Mrs. Harlan; music, Mrs. Kinney; Shakespeare, Mrs. Evans; art and travel, Mrs. R. E. Chase; legislative, Dr. Russell.

Captain J. M. Wells of Sawtelle, Cal., and Mr. Julius Kranz of Glendale, honorary members of the club, were present and received due recognition.

The afternoon's program closed with the reading of "Madam Butterfly" in three acts by Miss Nanon Herren, the very talented artist who has appeared in Glendale on previous occasions and whose genius is recognized by all who have heard her.

REDONDO'S RECALL

The recall election held at Redondo Beach on Tuesday did not recall Trustee Harry Brolaski, as was the intention of those who instigated the recall. Citizens of Redondo who are in a position to know say this recall is the second and the last one for Redondo. The recall has brought to the city libel suits, quarrels and added election expenses, and the result has been that in an attempt to recall four trustees, two recall elections were held and only one trustee was recalled.

Billy Sunday's secretary seems to be another who resigned and slammed the door behind him.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS OPEN

The public playgrounds at the Pacific avenue school are open for all Glendale children. Miss Maybelle Douglas has been supervising the games the last three days. New apparatus will be received on Thursday of this week and next week the tennis court, croquet and basketball grounds will be complete. Everyone interested should attend the mass meeting at the Pacific avenue school Thursday evening at 7:30.

MEETING OF PRESBYTERIAN BROTHERHOOD

The regular meeting of the Presbyterian Brotherhood was held at the church Tuesday evening. President Adams was in the chair and there was a good attendance. There were several live topics brought up by the question box aside from the assignments to various members of subjects for remarks and papers. This made the meeting of unusual interest and the hour and a half consumed by the program was not sufficient to allow a discussion of the various topics at much length, and it was decided to continue the consideration of one or more of them at the next regular monthly meeting. The principal speakers were Messrs. Van Kolken, Grafious, Gilmore, Preston, the chairman and Rev. Edmonds.

BAPTIST BIBLE CONFERENCE

The program of the Baptist Bible conference as arranged by Brother Troy provides a rare treat for the first evening's services. Rev. J. H. Sammis, a well-known student of the word, will deliver his interesting sermon on "The Second Coming of Christ." Thursday and Friday W. Leon Tucker will speak in the afternoon at 3 o'clock and in the evening at 8 o'clock. Friends of the church are cordially welcome at all of the sessions of the conference. Rev. Tucker speaks this afternoon at 3 o'clock.
